AMERICAN CHRISTIANITY, RACE, AND BIOLOGY
1700-Present

Course Info:

HURC 309/Reli 355
T/TH 2:30-3:45
Instructor: David Kline (David.A.Kline@Rice.Edu)

No prerequisites and STEM Majors encouraged to enroll

This course examines the relations between American Christianity, modern conceptions of race, and biological knowledge of human difference. We will explore how American understandings of race have been shaped, justified, and contested by a powerful resonance between two seemingly opposed traditions: religion and science.